A Level Fine Art Knowledge Organiser

A LEVEL FINE ART - UNIT INFORMATION

Fine art requires engagement with aesthetic and intellectual concepts through the use of traditional and/or digital media, materials, techniques and processes for the purpose of self-expression, free of external constraints.

Fine art may be created to communicate ideas and messages about the observed world, the qualities of materials, perceptions, or preconceptions. It can also be used to explore personal and cultural identity, society and how we live, visual language, and technology. Fine Art allows us to consider and reflect on our place in the world, both as individuals and collectively.

Term by Term

Figurative Form

Figurative Art refers to art made that is about or informed by the figure, it is usually a form of representational art – art that looks like reality.

Gestural refers to work that shows the action of the artist, i.e. the marks made show the direction, force and movement of the artists brush.

Artists explore ideas and processes independently but exist in a wider history, often building on the work of others but adapting these to address personal, cultural or universal themes.

The phrase standing on the shoulders of giants refers to the process of leaning from people the great artists of the past.

By stepping back from your art work you can see it clearer and are able to notice compositional and proportional mistakes easier.

Foreshortening is the effect of extreme perspective to create striking and dramatic images.

Contextual refers to the (art) work of others, artists, designers, or cultures.

Portraiture

Chiaroscuro- Italian term which literally means 'light-dark'. In paintings the description refers to clear tonal contrasts which are often used to suggest the volume and modelling of the subjects depicted. Artists who are famed for the use of chiaroscuro include Leonardo da Vinci and Caravaggio.

Jessica Rimondi – Italian Painter who focuses on portraiture, using a combination of realism, gesture and abstraction.

Best practice for research skills includes finding articles or interviews by the artist to obtain direct quote to illustrate points made.

Research must use subject specific language and focus on process, intention and context of the work.

Term by Term

Developing a theme

Sustained and focussed investigations are characterised by in-depth research and analysis, that identifies contextual factors that influence the work of own and other artists work.

First hand observation means looking at work directly, in a gallery or less formal setting.

Effective contextual references are directly to the intention of the work being developed.

ie. Picasso's Guernica painting would be a useful reference for work about conflict, alternatively, focussing more on visual elements, it could be used to inform a piece concerning abstraction.

Adding the words 'interview' or 'article' to a web search about an artist is the most effective way for making successful contextual links, identifying the concepts, and practice of the selected artist, as opposed to biographical details or irrelevant information.

Working in series, producing multiple pieces with small changes and variation is the best way to show development and refinement.

By understanding the properties of media, by knowing what marks and forms it takes it is possible to choose the best media for the chosen piece of work.

Recording ideas is demonstrated by both the technical skill and overall impact of the work but also by the appropriate use of media.

Personal and meaningful responses are outcomes that build on prior work, based on students own ideas.

Realising intentions means successfully completing work that is planned, original, and makes reference to the work of others.

Making connections between visual and other elements means how successful students are at learning from the work of others, what specific visual elements, working practices, techniques or concepts has the student been inspired by and importantly, what have they added and how has this knowledge been used to inform their own original work.

Pastiche is a simple copy of the work of another, without any personal touches, this is to be avoided.

Term by Term

Personal project

The related study is an extended written response that links to the main investigation project and explore the genre, subject matter, movement or historical framework of the overarching starting point, course of study or theme selected.

The aim of the related study is to enable learners to develop their ability to communicate their knowledge and understanding of art historical movements, genres, practitioners and artworks, considering the way that these change and evolve within chronological and other frameworks. It also builds their understanding of the relationship between society and art: art historical terms, concepts and issues; methods of researching, investigating and analysing; and how works are interpreted and evaluated

Writing for the Related study and when researching artists in general, should be more evaluative and analytical, rather than descriptive, critically analysing and developing insights into selected historical and contemporary references

A mind map should be presented creatively, showing technical skill and appropriate design decisions, linked to the chosen theme. A mind map is a visual piece that sets out your initial thoughts and planned routes of enquiry (what you intend to examine and explore during your project.)

First hand observation means looking at work directly, in a gallery or less formal setting.

Adding the words 'interview' or 'article' to a web search about an artist is the most effective way of making successful contextual links, identifying the concepts, and practice of the selected artist.

Working in series, producing multiple pieces with small changes and variation is the best way to show development and refinement, reflecting critically on own work.

Each media has different properties and uses, students working with paint for instance will explore ideas of translucence and opacity, using a range of tools to apply paint such as sticks, rags and brushes whilst sculptors will explore construction techniques, modelling, carving cutting etc... By understanding the properties of media, by knowing what marks and forms it takes, it is possible to choose the best media for the chosen piece of work

Overall students must demonstrate the appropriateness of the chosen media and the ability to realise the full potential of their ideas through the techniques employed.

Recording ideas is demonstrated by both the technical skill and overall impact of the work but also by the appropriate use of media.

Artists should understand the overall conventions of genres but not be restricted by them, deciding which characteristics to challenge and change.

Personal and meaningful responses are outcomes that build on prior work, based on students own ideas.

Realising intentions means successfully completing work that is planned, original, and makes reference to the work of others.

Making connections between visual and other elements means how successful students are at learning from the work of others, what specific visual elements, working practices, techniques or concepts has the student been inspired by and importantly, what have they added and how has this knowledge been used to inform their own original work.

Pastiche is a simple copy of the work of another, without any personal touches, this is to be avoided.

1 Mind Mapping – Ideas presented around the theme of the work

Central idea.
This is the starting point of your Mind Map and represents the topic you are going to explore. Your central idea should be in the centre of your page and should include an image that represents the Mind Map's topic.

Branches.
The main branches which flow from the central image are the key themes. You can explore each theme or main branch in greater depth by adding smaller branches.

Key words.
When you add a branch to your Mind Map, you will need to include a key idea. An important principle of Mind Mapping is using one word per branch. Keeping to one word sparks off a greater number of associations compared to using multiple words or phrases.

Colour coding.
This links the visual with the logical and helps your brain to create mental shortcuts. The code allows you to categorise, highlight and analyse information. Colours also make images more appealing and engaging.

Include images.
Images have the power to convey much more information than a word or sentence. They are processed instantly by the brain and act as visual stimuli to recall information.

2 Moodboard – A collage of ideas using collected images

Consider your theme.
Do you want it quite narrow or are you happy to collect a wider range of ideas.

Use a range of sources.
Internet images, photographs, wallpaper/fabric samples, lettering.

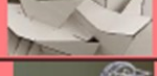

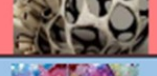

Don't limit yourself.
Even if it doesn't directly link to your starting point it may relate to the theme. Consider colours and words to help you.

Apply your ideas.
Your moodboard will directly link to the development of your project. If there is empty space fill it with sketches or annotations.

Pick a style.
Pulling it all together with a colour theme or visual style will make your page work together as a whole.

Example
I have created this piece using watercolours, coloured pencil and oil pastel. I have learnt how to blend the watercolours to show different tones and use oil pastels to show the darkest tones and add texture. The piece shows strong shapes and vivid colours. I have added coloured pencils to show some areas in more detail and focus. The artist Georgia O'Keeffe has inspired my piece. In her work she uses bright, bold colours to show close up views of flowers with a range of dark to light tones. I aim to now further develop my piece by using other materials. I could do this by experimenting with block prints on watercolour back grounds or possibly try painting onto fabric to then stitch into to show more detail.
