SIMPLE IDEOLOGY

LEFT WING: (SOCIALISM) Idea in basic right to equality of opportunity- redistribution of wealth from those with resources via taxation and high public spending.

CENTRE: (LIBERALISM): Idea that freedom and rights are most important, gov power should be limited and people should have rights protected- do not advocate for gov intervention in public spending etc.

RIGHT WING: (CONSERVATISM): Idea that people should be inherently unequal because some work harder than others. Believe in low taxes for "hardest working" and low public spending to encourage people to help themselves rather than rely on gov. "handouts"

Reforms Passed by the Blair Government Regarding Party Funding

- Independent electoral commission set up to supervise party spending on election campaigns.
- The amount a party could spend was capped at £30,000 in a constituency.
- Donations above £5000 (nationally) or £1000 within a constituency had to be declared and parties had to publish details of donations at regular intervals.
- Donations from individuals not on UK electoral register were banned.

However despite these reforms- 2006-7 cash for peerages scandal caused renewed debate about the issue of party funding.

A 2007 report by civil servant Sir Hayden Phillips proposed moving towards a system where parties were funded by taxation but so far no recommendations have been taken on. The Lib Dems, the smaller "3rd" party have accused Lab/ Tories of being bankrolled by wealthy in exchange for power.

Although MPs are paid from public taxation (£81,932) and their expenses also come from the public purse but Parties must get their funds from private donors, members and fund raising. However there is a special state Provision to support the activities of the opposition parties called short money. Party funding is controversial since there is suspicion that donations come at a "cost" (policy decisions or cash for honours EG Blair and peerages and the Ecclestone donation scandal).

REFORM PARTY FUNDING?

- Public funding would mean far less money for schools, Hospitals, transport etc.
- State funding based on share of the vote would mean Smaller parties were significantly disadvantaged, FPTP Disadvantages them enough already.
- People would object to their taxes being used to Fund parties they do not support or feel reflects their views- especially true of extremist parties such as Brexit Or BNP.
- Rich firms or individuals can influence politicians Anyway via lobbyists and donations to think tanks so It doesn't matter so much if they fund parties
- State funding could lead to calls for state regulation This could possibly reduce party independence

- +Parties play an important democratic role including educating the electorate therefore they deserve state funding.
- +Public funding would remove disparity in resources For different size parties.
- +If the state matched donations by party members, it might encourage participation by the public and recruitment to parties
- +It would prevent or limit the potentially corrupt influence of private backers on party policy
- +It would provide greater transparency and lead to less mistrust and disenchantment of citizens

Timeline Development Lab/ Cons Party

- 1812- Tory Party formed following a Conservative ideology
- 1846 Party split over Corn Laws
- 1874 Disraeli united the party and won a majority in the Commons.

Knowledge Organiser Government and Politics Component 1: Topic 2: Political Parties

Party Features

- Broad range of policies- clearly written in manifesto
- Shared ideology/ beliefs- coherent and cohesive
- Attempt to win power
- Organised with formal structure and elected leaders
- Work within political system and are accountable

Party Functions

1. To contest elections and try to win power- to form a govt or shadow govt in opposition.
2. To formulate policy and create a manifesto
3. To provide a platform for ideas and representing people's views also giving people ability to participate
4. To educate electorate about issues and the status of UK
5. To recruit future leaders as PM, ministers, shadow ministers, office holders etc

The Party System

The party system refers to how many parties can affect policy and compete in the political system. This often (but not always) relates to the electoral system. For many years FPTP guaranteed UK was a 2 party system where it was essentially a race between Conservatives and Labour. However modern developments such as Devolution and Partisan Dealignment have resulted in the emergence of a 3 party (some say 2.5 party system) with the Lib Dems and SNP winning a considerable number of seats. The Devolved Powers have more of a multi-party system as they have more PR used in their elections.

Factors effecting party success

1. Strength of Leadership
2. Factions within a party
3. The mass media
4. Social media

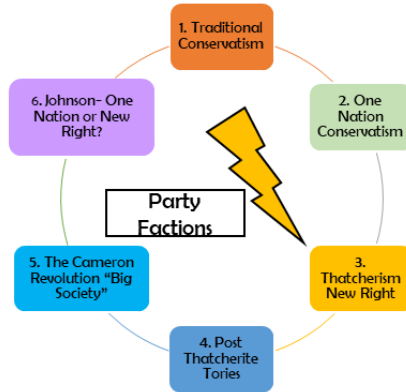

To what extent do factions determine the success or failure of a party? Make sure you can answer this question- have a good look at 2019 of an example- the factions within the Labour Party undeniably played a role in Corbyn's defeat as well as the media coverage- there was a great deal of anti-Corbyn bias in The mass media.

POLITICAL PARTIES

Conservative Party Evolution

PARTY FACTIONS

Conservatives

- Tory Reform Group (One nation- L of Party)
- Conservative Voice (Grassroots Centre right)
- The Bruges Group (Pro Brexit)
- ResPublica (Red Tories)
- Bright Blue (Pro Cameron)
- Free Enterprise Group (Liberal)

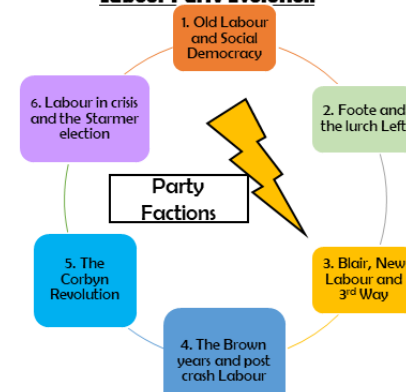

Labour

- Momentum (grassroots Left-wing Corbyn support)
- Labour First (oppose Corbyn- "right" of party labour ideas)
- Progress (represents new labour ideas)
- Compass (opposition to Blair)
- Tribune Group (soc dems)

Lib Dems

- Orange book group- return to Liberal economics
- Social Libs more advocacy of social ideas of Rawls
- Public spending and equality of opportunity

Labour Party Evolution

HAVE PARTIES ABANDONED TRADITIONAL IDEOLOGY?

+There is still a clear divide between Conservatives, Labour and the Lib Dems. Labour favours more public Spending and higher taxes for the wealthy, the Conservatives favour tax cuts and reduced public Spending. The Lib Dems favour constraints on govt Power (Bill of Rights) and a free market economy.

-Labour moved further to the left under Jeremy Corbyn

-The Conservatives have moved further to the right Under Boris Johnson (Pro Brexit, anti immigration, Universal credit)

-The Lib Dems have taken a more progressive stance Since Clegg left as leader-wishing to distance from Con

-Although Labour had rewritten clause IV under Blair And moved to the centre- Corbyn vowed to nationalise Transport and guaranteed everyone a right to a home, A living wage and free healthcare for all by increasing Investment in NHS and social care

-Labour began as a social democratic party. Belief in state owned industry, transport and healthcare. Blair's reform of Clause IV brought a new class of politicians to the party who sought to embrace the modern globalised economy and favoured Deregulation. Also cut ties with trade unions.

Although party moved back to the Left under Corb, the factions remain. Large no of Blairites in the party Similar story with Conservatives- Thatcherite New Right ideology was a move further to the right (soc pol) and liberal ec pol. Since Cameron revolution which moved party closer to the centre on issues like gay marriage, he also maintained some of thatcherite policies e.g. trade unions, universal credit and privatisation of elements of NHS, May and Johnson have only continued this.

Can you name 10 policies from the 2019 manifestos of 3 largest parties? (Need a range).

Smaller Parties

Smaller parties such as UKIP, Brexit, Greens and the SNP have demonstrated they are increasingly important in recent years. As they offer an alternative to Labour/ Conservatives- the larger parties have had to modify their policies to try and appeal to their lost voters. Centralisation of the larger parties has led to UKIP, Brexit party and Greens picking up millions of votes. Furthermore increased nationalism in Scotland due to devolution, has given the SNP the majority of votes in Scotland and a sizeable chunk of Westminster seats.

Whilst these smaller parties may never win control of Parliament- they have clearly had an impact on the policies of the larger parties. The Conservatives and Labour have both moved away from the centre and towards the right and left respectively, partly in an attempt to court some of the voters who have gone to the smaller parties.
